Organizing in 2026

On last year's membership renewal form, you noted which issues affecting Wyoming's environment and people mattered most to you. The poll results showed widespread interest in many issues, but the areas of most concern are in renewable energy, followed by local foods and water. The Community Organizers are positioned to work with you on these issues.

1973 to Present

Powder River was formed by a group of people as a grassroots community organization to address specific environmental issues. Their social action brought people together to pressure decision makers to meet collective goals to modify or stop certain activities. The success that this group of people has had on addressing energy related environmental issues has maintained Powder River's momentum for 53 years and going strong.
